Our colleague Cattleya Concepcion (she is an editor of our annual Almanac & Reader) has tactfully pointed out a few mistakes we have failed to flag until now. Here is one:

On page 82 of the 2007 Almanac & Reader, there appears to be what I believe is a typo. Quoting Harriet Martineau’s courtroom observations from 1835, the Bag says of Henry Clay: “. . . his small gray eye and placed half-smile conveying an expression of pleasure which redeems his face from it [sic] usual unaccountable commonness . . . .” Perhaps the Bag typed “it” when it meant “its”?

She is correct – “it” should be “its” and we admit it. Here is another:

On page 396 of the 2009 Almanac & Reader, is there a stray period? When the Bag cites the Shakespeare quote, it cites “Act. IV, Sc. 3, ll. 218-224.” Would it be better to cite “Act IV” (without a period)?

Correct again – the period after “Act” should be omitted. One more:

In the annotation for the Chief Justice John Jay bobblehead, which appears in the Autumn 2010 issue of the Bag and on the website, the Bag explains that the Chief Justice holds the second volume of the U.S. Reports partly because it includes his opinion in Chisholm v. Georgia, “which inspired the the [sic] 11th amendment to the Constitution.”

Concepcion is correct yet again – please ignore either the first “the” or the second “the” but not both. We thank her for the corrections.
