

EX ANTE

OUR MISTAKES

Sharp reader Aaron Kirschenfeld spotted two errors in the Spiro Agnew article in our Summer 2023 issue:

I'll pick a nit on p. 336, star page 8 of the document, in which the transcribed "... nor does it prohibit any State of organization from taking ..." should probably be an "or." The attribution footnote [on page 327] has a double "m" as well.

And there's more. Joseph Guerra, the author of The Possibly Imminent Demise of Chevron Deference in the same issue, noticed that we failed to delete these words – "are by no means" – on page 307. Please forget or ignore them.

COVERING VOLUME 27

The original Green Bag survived for 26 years (1889-1914), during which it went through a variety of cover designs. See, for example, pages 2 and 3 below. Our Green Bag – the second series – wrapped up its 26th year with our Summer 2023 issue, and we are carrying on, outliving our forebear. During our first 26 years, we did not tinker much with our cover – even when we changed the physical size of the journal in 2006, with volume 10 – but for year 27 we have made changes (only to the cover; we're leaving our insides as is).

This is, we confess, an act of self-indulgence. We like illustrations, and the new cover design (see page 4 below, or the cover of this issue) gives us room to include at least four more pictures in each issue.
